

Ambar’s Handwriting Plan

Class III · 10 minutes a day · make his everyday joined writing neat

Ambar already writes in a joined running hand and it is quite readable for Class III — so this is not about starting over. It is about neatness and consistency in his everyday writing. Looking at the samples, four small habits will make the biggest difference, and they are exactly what these daily sheets train.

What we are fixing

- 1 Sit on the line. Right now letters float above the line and some dip below it. Every letter should rest on one baseline — the green line on the practice sheets.
- 2 Even size. Small letters (a, e, o) should all be the same height; tall letters (l, h, t) about twice as tall; tail letters (g, p, y) hang below. Keeping sizes even is what makes writing look tidy.
- 3 One finger space between words. Some words run into each other. A single finger-width gap keeps the writing easy to read.
- 4 Steady slant. The letters lean at different angles. Pick one gentle slant and keep every letter leaning the same way.

Plus a few letter shapes to clean up along the way: r, s, f and p (Week 2 targets these).

The 10-minute daily routine

Do it at the same time every day — right after school, or just before dinner. Same three steps on every sheet:

- 1 Warm-up — 2 min. Trace the pattern rows to loosen the hand and settle into a rhythm.
- 2 Today’s letters — 5 min. Trace the grey model letters, then copy them on the blank lines below.
- 3 Copy neatly — 3 min. Copy one short sentence in his best writing, then tick the self-check boxes at the bottom.

Golden rule: quality over speed. One neat line is worth more than three rushed ones. Stop at 10 minutes even if it is not perfect — a little every day beats a long session once a week.

The four-week map

Week	Focus	What he practises
Week 1	Sit on the line & even size	Round letters, tall letters, tail letters, then all sizes together
Week 2	Neat letter shapes	The c-family, the tricky r / s / f, hump letters, loops, capital letters
Week 3	Joining & finger space	Joins from e, bridge joins (o w v), whole joined words, spacing between words
Week 4	Smooth & steady	Full sentences from his own class notebook — slant, evenness, and self-checking

After four weeks: repeat any week that was hard, or start again writing a little faster while staying neat.

How to help — and how to track it

Tips for the grown-up, rules for Ambar, and a progress chart

Five tips for the grown-up helping

- 1

Set up first. Feet flat, back straight, paper tilted slightly, pencil held loosely — not gripped tight. Good posture and grip fix half of messy writing before he even starts.
- 2

Go slow. Neatness comes from control, not speed. Praise careful letters rather than quick ones.
- 3

Trace, then copy. The grey letters build the movement in his hand before he writes it himself — don't skip the tracing.
- 4

Praise one thing. Each day, name one specific win: “your finger spaces are lovely today.” That works far better than “write neatly.”
- 5

One attempt per line. Don't rub out and redo endlessly — it frustrates him and teaches nothing. One good try, then move on.

What Ambar checks after every sheet

- ✓

Did my letters sit on the line?
- ✓

Are my letters an even size?
- ✓

Did I leave a finger space between words?
- ✓

Do my letters lean the same way?
- He then picks his best letter of the day and writes it in the box — this teaches him to notice his own good work.
